data pooling!

Don't you find it frustrating when you receive your mobile phone bill and find that some members of your team have exceeded their data allowance causing additional charges to your business and others have loads of their data allowance left at the end of the month that just disappears unused.

Constant mobile connectivity is a necessity for businesses today, whether it is for a mobile phone or a tablet, companies want their employees to work effectively and that includes being able to stay in contact and collaborate efficiently when they are on the move or working remotely. This accessibility is vital to your business.

Wouldn't it be great if you could have one pool of data that everyone could dip into for their differing data needs?

This is something that AGILIS Mobile can offer to your business by creating a mobile data pool for you.

Mobile data pooling combines groups of employees into a "pool", that enables data allowances be shared between users in the group. Say for example, you have 10 people within this pool, each one with 10GB of data to use, this gives you a combined total allowance of 100GB in your 'data pool'. Now, bearing in mind that you may have six of these users predominantly office based and the other four spending most of their work hours working remotely or out in the field. It's fair to assume that the field-based users will be more active with their data usage. Therefore, they will utilise the data leftover by the six office-based workers.

Simply put, the people that have heavier usage can tap into the plan entitlements left over by the lighter group members.

So, if you are looking for a solution to work out an effective way of making sure your mobile plans work for everyone within your business, you don't want to be concerned with certain users going over their monthly allowances and you want to avoid those pesky overage costs but still want to create a buffer, mobile data pooling could work very well for you. With an AGILIS mobile plan, we can work with you to create a bespoke package that will (as standard) also include unlimited calls, unlimited texts and free EU roaming as we understand that business doesn't always take place on your doorstep.
